NOMAD
CITY

Over the last 20 years, the capital of Mongolia Ulaanbaatar witnessed an unprecedented urbanization. Nomadic families from the rural provinces of the country poured into the city and created so called Ger Settlements. Traditional mobile dwellings – the Ger (Mongolian for yurt) – formed the nucleus of improvised settlement compounds where yurts and makeshift shelters are surrounded improvised walls and connected by dusty access lanes.

As a continuation of our NOMAD CITY Seminar and participation in the WELTSTADT Exhibition Project, a Summer School will take place in Ulaanbaatar with a two-fold goal: 1st, to complete the project in Yarmag 5th Khoroo, presenting the results of our work to the community and to the MUST students and Faculty, and to build a little prototype based on our research and design of last semester; 2nd, to start a new project in the area of Dambardarjaa, where together with the Ger Settlement, we will work in a Monastery still standing in that area, to explore the possibilities of recovering and integrating it to the community. The Workshop is organized through a cooperation of the Mongolian University of Science and Technology and the Habitat Unit, supported by the Goethe Institut Ulaabaatar and the Municipality of Ulaanbaatar.
